President's Message

Joe Torre, President
Brockport Chapter UUP

When bad men combine, the good must associate...

First of all, let me welcome everyone back for the new semester. I hope 2019 will prove professionally and personally rewarding to us all. Thanks also to all who joined us for the holiday dinner way, way back in December. Charles Callahan III, an old hand in Brockport UUP, remarked to me that it was the largest holiday celebration the UUP has ever had. I wish I thought I played a hand in this ... alas, all credit must go to Brittany.

At our annual holiday dinner, I made some effort to remind us of the many reasons we have to be cheerful as we begin 2019. Very briefly, we have a great relationship with an intelligent and thoughtful College at Brockport President, Heidi Macpherson, and her leadership team. When I spoke at her inauguration I said pointedly that I believed in her - that she is one of us. Three years and many differences later that remains true. At the system level we have a relatively new chancellor that likewise seems to be an intelligent and thoughtful scientist and administrator. Lots of folks have differences of opinion as to system and we all wish SUNY would advocate for itself more but these are reasonable differences of opinion and I feel a great deal of confidence in her leadership. Statewide, we have a legislature and governor that have recognized our value with a phenomenal contract - a contract, by the way, that has been made more valuable still by the current decline on Wall Street. The new contract, the culmination of years of work, could hardly have been more timely. In addition, the governor seems to have fully invested in the tuition-free Excelsior program which, despite its obvious funding drawbacks, promises to help our enrolments at a time of demographic decline. And so we have many reasons to be cheerful ...

Still, as I celebrate our present condition and as look hopefully to the future, I cannot help but feel uneasy. Writing as I do in the midst of multiple unfolding catastrophes, I can say with some certainty that we have much work to do and a great deal of progress to make. Everyday a fresh horror dulls our sensibilities; everyday a new outrage changes the field posts of what is normal and expected. Everywhere the rule of law and order based on policy and process - are being undermined. The state itself as an idea seems under attack from within the very agencies designed to effect its policies. The federal government shut down lasted for 34 days and a new one is in the distance - all to build a great wall of xenophobia; every federal agency seems to be run by a leadership hostile to its purpose - and hostile to any purpose other than personal enrichment and empowerment; our only hope is Justice, currently run by a con artist repeatedly investigated for fraud. Being a public servant and a professional educator has perhaps never been more difficult and more important. The question is, how did we get here?

It used to be that the main fault-lines in American political life were between liberals who believed in the power of the state to solve problems, and neo-liberals who looked to the market for the same reasons. Although the "liberals" were ascendant in post-World War II America and dominated both of our political parties, in 1980 Ronald Reagan famously declared that government was not the solution, it was the problem; this became GOP dogma going forward even as Reagan and others grew the government and the services it provides.

Presidents Message cont'd

Ever since then, it seems many Americans likewise have struggled to see value in government institutions and, consequently, in public service; a recent Huffington Post article even noted that many Americans who receive government benefits do not even recognize them as derived from the government. My sense is, however, that this is not an accurate representation of our current situation and that these traditional divisions fail to have explanatory power for our current dilemmas. As I noted at our holiday dinner, George Herbert Walker Bush's recent death gave us occasion to marvel at what a life of service to nation looks like. Bush, vice-President to Reagan, was a public servant for most of his productive life. He was a World War II veteran, captain of the Yale baseball team, oil executive, congressman, head of the CIA, Ambassador to the UN, Vice President, and President - it was for his many contributions as a civil servant and soldier that President Obama awarded him the Presidential Medal of Freedom. So too of the generation of bright young men and women that came of age around Reagan, including Bush's sons - Jeb and George W. Bush - both lifelong public servants. Hawkish internationally, wary of the welfare state, and invested in the market, the great majority of GOP neo-liberals nevertheless deeply valued the state apparatus that built and supported America's great post-war supremacy. Put simply, they believed in public service and ably led public institutions.

So if the crisis we face in governance is not based on the traditional division between the liberals and neo-liberals, what is it based on? Is there an ideology that encapsulates the current political moment? Is there a logic or an ideal?

Our current malaise is more venal than ideological. Reasonable people could disagree and do disagree as to the role of the state in society. What we have today, however, is not a difference of ideology but a series of criminal conspiracies. At the state level, outgoing governors and legislatures cripple properly elected representatives by preemptively writing laws to limit their power; having failed, despite generations of gerrymandering and voter suppression, to win even tainted elections, they try desperately to cling for power through an unabashed assault on democracy. They undermine and underfund public institutions not because they are ineffective but because they work; because government is an engine for the sort of equality they are mightily struggling to withhold from the very Americans that have put them in power. At the national level, people who do not believe in society as an idea or ideal - are busy creating a kleptocracy - turning the United States into the banana republics we once planted around the world. We are the new Iran, Panama, Nicaragua, etc. Listen to John O. Brennan, former head of the CIA, describe Donald Trump's inner circle: "Your cabal of unprincipled, unethical, dishonest, and sycophantic cronies is being methodically brought to justice. We all know where this trail leads. If your utter incompetence is not enough to run you out of office, your increasingly obvious political corruption surely will."

Enough said. The question then is how did this come about? Russian revenge for years of our meddling all over the world is one answer. The fallacies of patriarchy are another. I am going to suggest, however, a deeper problem or malaise that enables this situation: apathy. This suggests in part that we are the problem. We are the problem because as John Stuart Mille once noted, "Bad men need nothing more to compass their ends, than that good men should look on and do nothing." We are the unnamed co-conspirators in our own demise. A similar lesson, if more elaborately phrased, comes to us from the great eighteenth century Irish philosopher, Edmund Burke:

*Whilst men are linked together, they easily and speedily communicate the alarm of any evil design. They are enabled to fathom it with common counsel, and to oppose it with united strength. Whereas, when they lie dispersed, without concert, order, or discipline, communication is uncertain, counsel difficult, and resistance impracticable. Where men are not acquainted with each other's principles, nor experienced in each other's talents, nor at all practised in their mutual habitudes and dispositions by joint efforts in business; no personal confidence, no friendship, no common interest, subsisting among them; it is evidently impossible that they can act a public part with uniformity, perseverance, or efficacy. In a connection, the most inconsiderable man, by adding to the weight of the whole, has his value, and his use; out of it, the greatest talents are wholly unserviceable to the public. No man, who is not inflamed by vain-glory into enthusiasm, can flatter himself that his single, unsupported, desultory, unsystematic endeavours, are of power to defeat the subtle designs and united cabals of ambitious citizens. When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall, one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.

-Edmund Burke, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents 82-83 (1770) in: Select Works of Edmund Burke, vol. 1, p. 146 (Liberty Fund ed. 1999) emphasis added.

"When bad men combine, the good must associate ..."

We suffer as a nation not from a clash of political ideologies but from a coup d'état from a cabal of unprincipled, unethical, dishonest sycophants aiming to destroy our democracy; this is a criminal conspiracy designed merely for the engrossment of power and riches to the demise of the greater good. We must associate or suffer the consequences.

The UUP is an association of public servants and education professionals dedicated to the greater good. As we begin 2019, let's work together to maintain our democratic institutions and systems of governance. Let's read, talk, write, vote, volunteer, educate, educate, educate - our students, ourselves, our neighbors. Write Congress! This is still, for now, a democracy. Make your voice heard. Doing nothing is not an option.

UUP Sponsored Naloxone (NARCAN) Training

Thursday, February 14th the Brockport Chapter of UUP will be hosting three NARCAN training sessions in the Eagles lookout for all UUP Members.

Session choices are:

9:00am-10:30am
12:00pm-1:30pm
2:30pm-4pm

Please email Brittany (bprofitr@brockport.edu) with desired session choice to RSVP, no later than February 8th.

Naloxone has been fundamental in the efforts to decrease rates of fatal overdoses. This training teaches first responders, likely opioid overdose witnesses and community members to understand, recognize, respond to and reverse suspected opioid overdoses using naloxone. Participants will learn ways to obtain free or low-cost naloxone for personal use. This training is modeled after the evidence-based SAMHSA Opioid Overdose Prevention Toolkit.

Responding to Opioid Overdose State Targeted Response

Training Description:

Naloxone has been fundamental in the efforts to decrease rates of fatal overdoses. This training teaches first responders, likely opioid overdose witnesses and community members to understand, recognize, respond to and reverse suspected opioid overdoses using naloxone. Participants will learn ways to obtain free or low-cost naloxone for personal use. This training is modeled after the evidence-based SAMHSA Opioid Overdose Prevention Toolkit.

Training objectives include:

- to increase understanding and awareness of fatal overdoses related to opioids and the impact within the community
- to identify risk factors for an overdose
- to be able to recognize a suspected overdose
- to be able to identify the five essential steps for first responders as outlined in the SAMHSA Opioid Overdose Prevention Toolkit in the event of an overdose
- to be able to correctly use naloxone to save lives
- to understand how to access the Naloxone Co-payment Assistance Program (NCPAP) to obtain free or low-cost naloxone.

Who Should Attend:

This interactive training is tailored for first responders or other likely witnesses to an opioid overdose.

Why Attend:

- to become part of the solution to solving the opioid issue in the community
- to learn how to save a life during an overdose situation
- to receive education on crucial information related to opioids and the surrounding community

Background:

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) awarded states grants as part of the State Targeted Response (STR) to the opioid crisis. One of New York State's initiatives as part of the grant focuses on addressing opioid overdose related fatalities in counties showing very high rates of overdose deaths and emergency department visits related to opioid use disorder. This initiative involves training thousands of first responders and other likely witnesses in these counties.

We're forming a Brockport Labor Reading Group! All faculty and staff are welcome to participate as we discuss books and articles about labor and work. Our first reading will be David Graeber's recent book Bullshit Jobs: A Theory (2018).

Future readings will be determined by the group.

We'll meet to discuss Graeber's book in the first couple weeks of the Spring semester (date and time TBD). E-mail Alissa Karl (akarl@brockport.edu) if you would like to take part.

DSA: Shame or Solidarity?

Alissa G Karl, Department of English

There are two possible responses to the debacle that unfolded around the Discretionary Salary Adjustments (DSA) for 2017-18 that were mandated by our new contract with the State. We can shame the College administration for the inadequate and chaotic process that they foisted upon faculty and staff in order to meet their obligations to pay DSAs by the end of this year. Alternatively, we can take this as an opportunity to recognize how the assumptions underlying individual merit-based bonuses are insidious and ultimately dangerous for us as workers. The answer to the administration's flawed DSA application and selection process is not a "rational" perfection of protocols for determining merit-based pay, but an affirmation of our solidarity.

The problems with this semester's DSA process are obvious. In an attempt to determine which workers' performance could be deemed meritorious and thus worthy of bonus pay, the administration mandated unclear procedures and a woefully short timeline for employee nominations and various levels of review. An unforeseen, frantic workload burden was placed on faculty and staff who were responsible for reviewing the nominations, and the rationality and accountability of the process remains unclear. Colleagues across campus who were involved in ranking nominations made well-intentioned attempts to make the best of the process—to generate, as it were, a rational and equitable method in an ad-hoc fashion. But our earnest efforts and legitimate complaints distract us from the real critique that we need to make: that of the culture of "exceptional merit" of which our DSA awards are an example.

Individual "merit pay" is a part of a work culture under which we are encouraged to operate as lone actors, cultivating our personal capital and investing our personalities in the jobs that we do. It goes without saying that bonus pay for "meritorious performance" singles out workers as individuals; the figure of the individual meritorious worker rests on the presumption that labor issues from discrete motivations and inspiration, rather than our collective and collaborative efforts, or from the determining historical and structural conditions that have created the kinds of roles we perform.

When we are in competition with one another for limited "bonus" awards, we inhabit these kinds of atomized positions; we create our own compulsions to increase our workload; we are distracted and fail to recognize the value and integrity of the jobs we have been trained and hired to do; we lose sight of what we can accomplish by standing together.

The DSA tournament of individual merit mirrors the competitions for funding and recognition in which campus departments and programs must take part to maintain themselves—and as we know, while some "win" in those contests for patronage and favor, many also lose. Such "merit" competitions deny that our work is valuable and productive in its own right.

In short, looking out for one's individual merit means that one's job is never done and never good enough. On top of our existing workload, we must add not only "meritorious" performance but also the time and energy to display that performance in order to compete for recognition. But we do not need to help the administration perfect its shambolic attempts to grade us against one another. Instead, we need solidarity to advocate for the compensation, support, and resources that we all need to accomplish our mission.

We all want to be recognized for the work that we do; but DSA is part of a culture that extracts our surplus work by alienating us from one another.

"When we are in competition with one another for limited "bonus" awards, we inhabit these kinds of atomized positions; we create our own compulsions to increase our workload..."

DSA Awards 2018

Listed below are the DSA awards for 2018. They are printed here first and foremost so that we can take the opportunity to congratulate those of you who have been recognized for your efforts and achievements in your roles as part of our campus community. ## Benefits designed exclusively for NYSUT members

NYSUT members and their loved ones have access to dozens of endorsed shopping, travel & personal programs available through NYSUT Member Benefits, including discounts on hotels & vacations; car & truck rentals; international group tours; sports & concert tickets; theme parks & attractions; and more.

Whether you are participating in one of our shopping/entertainment/travel offerings; auto, homeowners or life insurance plans; or financial or legal services, NYSUT members have the "Power of the Union" behind them ready to serve as their advocate.

The following is just a sample of the endorsed programs available to NYSUT members:

Bose -- NYSUT members receive special educator pricing on high-end, high-quality electronics such as music systems, headphones and bluetooth speakers. You must contact Bose toll-free at 877-709-2073 and mention "educator pricing" to receive this exclusive pricing.

Orlando Employee Discounts -- NYSUT members save up to 30% on unforgettable Orlando, FL excursions to Disney World, Universal Studios and many other attractions.

Grand Circle Travel -- NYSUT members can enjoy a number of unique travel deals on international river cruises and other travel opportunities with Grand Circle's small ship cruise tours, river cruises and land tours.

Member Appreciation Month is back!

One of our most popular annual events is set to return this February. The 2019 Member Appreciation Month celebration will be filled with a series of prize drawings for items donated by NYSUT Member Benefits and our endorsed program providers -- including gift cards, iPads, Echo Dots and more!

As a MAP Alert member, you are eligible to win prizes every single day throughout the month of February.

All MAP Alert members are already entered to win; if you have colleagues who would like to be eligible to win, they simply need to sign up for our MAP Alert service on the Member Benefits website. Prize winners will be listed daily on the Member Benefits website.

To learn more about Member Benefits-endorsed programs & services, visit memberbenefits.nysut.org or call 800-626-8101.

For information about contractual endorsement arrangements with providers of endorsed programs, please contact NYSUT Member Benefits.
